

ABSTRACT

In an extendable protective awning and motor vehicle having a protective awning, the protective awning includes a base frame which may be fastened to the vehicle and a protective surface which may be moved between at least one retracted basic position and an extended end position by a linkage. The base frame is designed for arrangement in the interior of the vehicle in the region of the upper boundary of a door, window or flap opening of the vehicle, so that the protective surface may be extended from its basic position through the opened door, window or flap opening into this position.